Hangor. Talk not to us of the fall of Bangor. Of its broken banks, and broken merchants, and broken mechanics, and empty houses, and empty stores for when we take a glance at the business wharves, and witness the multitude of vessels filled with its rafts, and boats, and watermen, we are altogether incredulous to the croaking predictions of those who, from motives of ill will, or of jealousy, are wont to disparage our prospects, or sneer at our would-be-greatness. Bangor is so situated that it must increase must be a large and wealthy city.' What though speculation, with its hungry may, has visited it, and almost exhausted it of the " fruits it had fain up for many years" what though it has suffered reverse, can it be argued from this, that if has no resources from which again to fill its " barns," or energy and disposition to apply theil to those resources as in former days it was accustomed :

Bangor has a recuperative power which cannot be overcome. If we cast our eye upon the man of the State and see what a great country must centre its trade here, we can but acknowledge this, however unwillingly. And when we become acquainted with its population, we shall be satisfied that any resources which it possesses for improvement, will be resorted to success-

Already are all habitable tenements some of which have been awhile deserted again filledrents are improving; stores are filling up, and the life, and exemplary industry, which were so admired previous to 1505, are again visible. No Hangorean need ever despair, if he be healthy, temperate and industrious, he will prosper, for I BANGOR WILL GO AHEAD.

> Augusta, Wednesday Evening, October 20, 1841.

The proceedings at the Mechanics' State Convention, at the State House to-day, have been highly interesting. The whole number of delegates in attendance was between one and two hundred."

After the organization of the Convention, a Committee was raised to report the business before the Convention. An interesting communication was read from the Eastport Mechanic Association and referred to the Committee.

In the afternoon, in accordance with the arrangements made by the Committee, a public address was address by Mr. James R. Macomber of Bangor. It was a plain, practical, and wor thy performance, giving a very clear outline of the objects of the Convention; and the means of accomplishing them. Several resolutions were thon introduced and discussed with much animation, and passed with great unanunity. In cussion ensued.

A Portland correspondent of the Maine Temperance Garotte says that "a new Ernt has gone into operation in that city, with a determination to sell rum on a very large scale, if persons can be found to buy it." About six mouths ago, a conspiracy was formed, which, bold in its object and ingenious in contrivance, bid fair to overthrow the dynasty and ensure to the Brazilians an independent gov

Neither the old King, nor his overbearing wife, has the slightest hold on the affections of the people. It was well known that the Crown Prince and Princess but more especially the Infanto Donna Maria, (the latter as born among them,) were the sole ties which restrained the populace from draying the last vestige of royalty from the land.

Carlos del Panfilo, the commander of a Portuguese frigite, conceived the daring plan of serving Don Pedro; his Princess and the Infanta. His purpose was to seize them late at night, and without noise, conduct them to the quay in front. where his boats would be in waiting to convey them to the ship. Once on board, he find liftle to fear, for there was not a man-of-war prepared to pursue him. Moreover, of the largest vessels, the Gloria was decidedly the fastest sailer. From the forts, he had little to apprehend; for even if the alarm were given, he need but expose his prisoners, to deter them from firing. But his object was secrecy; for on that, and on ex pedition, depended his sole hope of success. Once clear of the land, he meant to steer his course for the Pacific, and to liberate his captives when he reached the coast of Peru. Step by step he sounded his officers, and found them; with few exceptions, readily disposed to recond him. The impracticables were so few as not to discourage him; and by keeping them on board under close surveillance, he prevented their giving information. With the men he had so ingratiated himself, that they were prepared to stand by him at any hazard. Seven or eight suspicious characters were kept employed apart from the rest of the crew to whom indeed the plan was not fully divulged, until an hour before the time of its execution. With the aid of some active friends on shore, he had succeeded in bribing a Sergeant of the Royal Guard, who betrayed to them the watchword of the night. The
